In this tutorial, you will learn how to add and modify transitions.

Transitions Browser

You can find all transitions in the Transitions Browser. Click on the Transitions icon to show or hide the Transitions Browser. Transitions are mainly for Video, but can be used for Audio as well. However, each transition is set to “S-Curve” dissolve for audio, so if you are using it on Audio clips, it does not matter which Transition you choose.

Preview a transition by hovering your cursor over the Transition thumbnail to view it in the Playback Window.

Search for a Transition by typing in the search bar across the bottom of the browser.

Add Transition

To add a transition, drag and drop the Transition from the Transitions Browser in between the two clips you want to transition between in your Timeline.

Modify Transition

To modify the transition, select the transition (make sure it is bordered by a yellow line) and go to the Inspector window. The Inspector can be seen the right of the Playback window. If it is not there, click on the Inspector Icon in the toolbar to show or hide it.

Each Transition has different settings to modify in the Inspector. Play around with the settings in the first box to achieve the look you want.

The second box has the “Audio Crossfade”. This is consistent through all transitions. Select between Linear, +3dB, -3dB, and S-Curve. To apply a transition to video or audio only, detach the audio by right clicking the clip.
and selecting “Detach Audio” to apply the transition to the Video only or the Audio only.

Change the duration of the Transition by clicking on either end and dragging it inwards to make the duration shorter, or outwards to make the duration faster. For more precise

Default Transition

To apply the default transition, which is set to Cross Dissolve, click on end of a clip where you want to apply the transition, and hold Command + T on your Keyboard.

To apply a transition to both ends of a clip, select the entire clip and hold Command + T on your keyboard.

To change your default transition, right-click the Transition you would like to change it to, and select “Make Default”.
